

TRANSLATION OF DIARY OF HAMMAN YAJI, D.H. MADAGALI
1912 - 1927

[by Assistant District Officer L.N. Reed]

Introductory Note

This document, registered as Yolaprof:ACC-14 in the National Archives Kaduna, was copied from the original and subsequently entered manually into a Word file, retaining original spellings. The text has been checked by spellcheck and by myself.

Notes in () parentheses are Reed's. Where these contain reference to the rest of pages, he is referring to pages of the original manuscript. Since this has been lost, I have excised Reed's recording of MS page numbers. Where, due to the state of the typescript, readings are uncertain or I have suggested interpolations, these are enclosed in [] square brackets. I have also added an index of places, ethnonyms and selected personal names and titles.

As a test of the conversion from the Islamic to the Christian calendar, the dates of the two eclipses of the moon noted by Hamman Yaji were checked using the Voyager 2.1 programme. Once taken into consideration that for Muslims the day starts at sunset, both were correct to the day.

INTRODUCTION

Description of Diary

1. This diary of Haman Yaji, ex-District Head of Madagali, is a fairly regularly-kept record of matters, which he considered worth recording, for the period from September 16th 1912, the date of the first entry, to August 25th 1927, a day or two before his arrest. While it is in a general way a document of quite considerable interest, it is disappointing in the meagerness of the information it gives on topics about which one would have liked to hear more, and very large portions of it are concerned with a monotonous recital of the writer's own movements, his trading transactions and similar matters of slight importance. Having regard to the purpose of the translation, it did not appear necessary to record all these entries in full, but at the same time, it did seem desirable that some portion of the diary should be translated in detail, in order that a better idea might be given of the scope of the diary as a whole. As the later years appear to be of more particular interest from an Administrative Officers' point of view, the period from January 1st 1924 onwards has been selected for translation in full, while for the earlier years only such portions have been recorded as appear to be of present-day interest.

Difficulty of Sequence of Pages

2. The MS consists of 215 pages written for the most part on loose double sheets. As these had become disarranged and as there is only one reference throughout the diary to the year to which any particular sheet refers, it was a matter of no small difficulty to re-arrange the sheets in their correct order. This was especially so for the earlier years where references in the text to individuals did not assist as in the later years to fix the date. Fortunately, however, there were various indications by which the order could be ascertained, and all the pages have now been correctly arranged and numbered.

Conversion of Dates

3. The conversion of the Muhammadan dates into the dates of the Christian calendar was done by reference to one or two known dates and calculation backwards or forwards from them. Checks were made by a conversion formula or by reference to old Muhammadan calendars where they were available.

Names of the Months

4. The names of the Muhammadan months are given by the diarist in most cases in their Fulani form, although sometimes the Arabic form is used. The following is a list of the months and their Arabic equivalents:-

Fulani	Arabic
Haram or Haram Awwal	Muharram
Haram Tumbindu or Tumbindu Haramji	Safar
Haram Sakitindu or Haram Petel	Rabi'u al Awwal
Banjaru Awwal	Rabi'u al Thani
Banjaru Tumbindu	Jumada al Ula
Banjaru Sakitindu	Jumada al Ukhra
Sumatendu Waube	Rajab
Tairordu Sumaye or Jaujaungel	Sha'aban
Sumaye	Ramadhan
Juldandu	Shawwal
Siutorandu	Dhu al Qa'adah
Laihaji	Dhu al Hijjah

5. As has been mentioned above, there is one reference to a year, namely on p. 61 [of the MS, relating to 25-2-25]. This passage is obscure: the first of Jaujaungel is the beginning of the 8th month and the correct year is 1343. It is therefore permissible to describe the event referred to as occurring in the year 1342 plus 7 months, and 7 months is equal to 208 days. But the further addition: "If you subtract 3 months etc." seems to have no meaning. It is possible that 3 months is an error for 5 months and that he meant to say that it is the same thing as taking away 5 months from the year of the Hijrah, namely 1343, but it is not at all obvious what the writer's intention was.

The Language

6. In general the Arabic is of a very illiterate kind and it is sometimes very difficult to discover the correct meaning. Where a passage is obscure from the linguistic point of view, it has been noted as such in the translation. Where, as frequently happens, the Arabic is quite clear but the writer's intention is obscure, a literal translation has been given, and no attempt has been made to guess at the meaning. It is, of course, also to be remarked that a diary necessarily contains references which to the diarist, writing in a telegraphic style for his own private purposes, are quite clear, but which are not apparent to one who has not been a participant in the incidents related.

7. In connection with the language question, it should be noted that the text is full of Fulani words, which the scribes have fallen back on, when they are at a loss for the correct Arabic.

8. References should also be made to the occurrence between entries in the diary of various scrawls, which appear to be Arabic or Fulani but which are quite unreadable. It is believed that Haman Yaji could not write very well, and it may be that these scrawls are private memoranda of his own written in his handwriting.

Transliteration of Names

9. The transliteration of European names into Arabic distorts them until they are practically unrecognisable, and it has been impossible in the case of some French and German names to make even a guess at the correct name in the absence of other documents, e.g. office files, which might throw light on the subject. The same applies to a lesser degree in the case of pagan names and names of places, especially as the same name appears sometimes in as many as 3 different forms in different places in the text.
